Dear Sir/Madame:

I am sending you this email to express my interest in a job opportunity in the field of architecture you may be offering. I would like to introduce myself as a promising candidate for you to consider.

Currently, I have recently graduated from the faculty of Architecture in Chulalongkorn University in the course of Thai architecture. Our academic structure is focused from the study in Traditional Thai architecture to the application of Thai architectural styles to modern buildings. Graduates are knowledgeable in both contemporary architecture and traditional ones. I can design Thai-styled buildings like houses, resort hotels, government buildings, museums, and places of worship. Personally, I have keen interest in vernacular architecture, history of architecture, and various other arts and sciences which are useful in the professional practice of an architect.

I have done an internship in a Japanese design company in Okinawa, Japan for approximately 2 months. Therefore, I am initially experienced with Japanese professional culture and environment. I am also taking Japanese language courses and hoping to improve my Japanese tongue further. I can also annotate drawings in Japanese if necessary. After my graduation the prior year, I have also done a few independent architectural design projects upon private commissions including a Buddhist temple, houses, and more. Above all, I am still learning and I am willing to learn whatever your company has to offer. With great certainty, I daresay that I will make a great addition to your team on the international level.

Attached is my personal information relevant to the job along with my certificate of graduation and portfolio. I am looking forward to discussing this career opportunity with you further.

Sincerely,
Aphiwat Mankan
