GRADUATION PROJECT

The topic is "Invention of Common mode absorption device with low budget and its testing"
Common mode absorption device (CMAD) is one of the devices used to test the propagation of electromagnetic waves through the air or Radiated emission. Given the high price of commercial products, this project tries to find a suitable material to create CMAD with low budget. This invention process starts from selecting the ferrite core to assemble and test the insertion loss value to be close to the real CMAD data sheet. Then, the developed CMAD is used to conduct several tests with electrical appliances including air conditioners and electronic ballasts.
